Farewell to Bitcoin, comes the Monero

Bitcoin is an electronic money created in 2009, whose inventor is known by the pseudonym Satoshi Nakamoto. Unlike fiat currencies, Bitcoin has the characteristic that no one can control its value because of the decentralized nature of the currency creation method. Electronic money attracts the attention of many investors but remains a security risk currency. Currently Bitcoin, is about to be overtaken by Monero soon could overcome it. The reason is simple: it is becoming the most used in the dark web. The new money makes it harder to trace the path of the funds because it brings together many transactions and it becomes almost impossible to reconstruct the flow of money.
