

Scotland seeks independence

One of the biggest problems related to Brexit has always been access to the single market. Remember, inter alia, that despite the referendum of June 23rd have ratified the EU's abandonment of the whole United Kingdom, both Scotland and Northern Ireland have expressed on that occasion their desire to remain within the Union. Scotland has returned threatens the United Kingdom because of its access to the single market after EU abandonment. If the country fails to maintain access to the single market will be a new referendum designed to enshrine the independence of Scotland from the United Kingdom itself. The EU appears reluctant to grant special treatment of any kind to Scotland, and because the official negotiations for the separation of the UK have not yet been initiated, both because of the fear that such a solution might encourage other secessionist movements in Europe.
